

Accessible text to accompany “office workers survey August 2021” infographic

1,000 office workers across the UK were surveyed in August 2021.

22% reported that their offices had been redesigned to support hybrid working.
[Graphic of office plans on paper and pencil.]

7% had received training in managing or participating in hybrid meetings.
[Graphic of two people sat round a table with someone else on a computer monitor.]

31% were aware of a formal flexi-hours policy in their organisation.
[Graphic of a document with a pen.]

80% said they wanted to have an assigned desk rather than sharing with others.
[Graphic of a desk with computer, cup, and pencil holder on.]

36% did not have a dedicated workspace from home.
[Graphic of a person working on a laptop, sat on a sofa.]

37% wanted to work in the office 5 days a week.
[Graphic of two office blocks.]

30% wanted some level of hybrid work pattern.
[Graphic of a house split in two – one side with an office and the other with a bed.]

33% never wanted to work in the office.
[Graphic of a house.]

Find out more: www.bitly.com/AdaptingOffices

(Logos in the footer of the infographic are for: Adapting offices for the future of work, the Economic and Social Research Council, and Leeds University Business School.)